Jerry Schad : Afoot Afield in San Diego County before purchasing it in order to gage whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised Afoot Afield in San Diego County:

This is the book to have for San Diego hiking By Robert Sinkovits I had received this book from a friend before I moved to San Diego three years ago, and started hiking here the weekend I came out for a job interview. Even being completely unfamiliar with San Diego county, I found it easy to choose some great hikes. The descriptions, mileages, and directions to trailheads are all quite useful. Difficulty ratings are accurate - very important when choosing hikes to do with kids, parents, spouses, etc. The only reservation I have about this book is that it is so comprehensive that a very small number of hikes have slipped in there that I would not consider doing again. One in particular involved hiking along a poison oak covered trail that was littered with broken beer bottles and old tires. I'm almost reluctant to bring up this point since the vast majority of the hikes are truly wonderful. 1 of 1 people found the following review helpful. Be careful which version you get

By Wilderness Techno Geek
I didn't figure out (like many others before me) that there is a newer version of this (admittedly fabulous) book which contains even more. I'm not going to say that this isn't a great book, but I was specifically looking for more of the remote hikes, and it seems that is in the newer version. That's the only reason I dropped star... it's not the book's fault, it's mine. I may pick up the other one as well (it's actually cheaper; go figure). 2 of 2 people found the following review helpful. Best book on hiking San Diego County's backyard ever written
By William
Best book on hiking San Diego County's backyard ever written. If you want just one book, intelligently written and informative, on exploring the many opportunities in the land of "almost perpetual sunshine" this (or any edition of this book) is the one to buy.

Our bestselling guidebook explores San Diego County with its wealth of natural scenery-unspoiled coastal canyons, pine-crested mountains, and spectacular desert landscapes. 220 hiking trips are organized by geographical areas, each with an accurate map.
