The honesty and detailed stories told by Sharon are amazing and have already helped me realize that my dream can be attained if I work hard. This may sound like something a lot of people say, but I mean it when I say that this book has changed my life. My career path may even change because of my need to fulfill my lifelong dream. I definitely recommend this book. That's saying something because I'm extremely picky with books, film, and any type of reading material. Great job Sharon! 0 of 0 people found the following review helpful. Living your Dream By kind! Totally enjoyed this book. I felt like I was with Sharon as she traveled both near and far. I felt her joy, excitement, sadness, disappointment's, as well as longing to be brave enough to fly by the seat of my pants as she has done. I found it very refreshing to see a story that also included so many stories of normal lives of people of other cultures and learn we are all reaching for the same thing, love, acceptance, and our own self-worth, but also to recognize the qualities of others around us as we live amongst each other. Highly recommend reading, you won't want to put it down!!! 0 of 0 people found the following review helpful. Very interesting people you choose to meet and interview on your way! By John M Mousell like the parts of this book where you are sharing stories and experiences with other people. I love the stories about your home region in Wisconsin! I will share this book with my daughters.

When life doesn't go as planned, it's best to embrace it as content...at first...and then to do something about it! That's the mantra that Sharon Sobotta lives by and hopes you'll consider living by after reading her book. When Sharon realized she wouldn't accomplish her blueprint plan of having a husband and kids by the age of thirty, she rewrote her plan. When on January 1, 2009, on the heels of a breakup, she heard on the news that a 22 year-old unarmed man named Oscar Grant had been fatally shot by a police officer, she decided she had to do something, not just to pull herself out of her rut, but to challenge injustice. She joined Pacifica radio's journalism program and found her passion in the simple act of collecting voices and stories of people from all walks of life. From that moment onwards, she's never gone anywhere without her audio recorder. When Oprah Winfrey announced that she was making way for a viewer to have their own show on her network in 2010, Sharon took the challenge to heart and traveled from Las Vegas to Atlanta to Kuala Lumpur to Ubud, Bali to pitch a show called Off the Beaten Path, with the grandiose vision of making those stories she collected accessible to the masses. Entrenched with the ups and downs of relationships and the depths of soul searching and justice seeking, Confessions of a Dream Chaser takes you on a journey of what is possible in life when you keep your vision and do away with the plan.

About the Author Sharon Sobotta is a journalist, a writer, the director of a women's resource center at Saint Mary's College of California, a doula and a mother. As a reporter for Pacifica KPFA in Berkeley, California, Sharon covers stories ranging from the Justice for Oscar Grant and Trayvon Martin movements and actions to free Marrison Alexander to Chevron's connection to the global environmental crisis and the complex anti-war movement. Sharon's vision as a journalist, a women's center director and a feminist is to make stories and voices of people from all walks of life accessible to the masses.
