Sue Carpenter : Courvoisier's Book of the Best (1992) before purchasing it in order to gage whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised Courvoisier's Book of the Best (1992):

A worldwide team of over 200 celebrities, led by Loyd Grossman and by founder editor Lord Lichfield, pool their knowledge to bring you the very best of everything - hotels, restaurants, shops, bargains, travel, nightlife and culture - from America to Zimbabwe; from the luxury hotels of Singapore to the best and cheapest markets in London; and from opera in Milan to street theatre in New York. Idiosyncratic and independent, this book is packed with first-hand information on over 2000 places of interest across five continents. This new edition has a special emphasis on value, and there are details of free or nearly-free activities for adults and children in every major city in the world. Featuring contributions from gurus, gourmets and good-timers such as Terence Conran, Clement Freud, Madhur Jaffrey, Andrew Lloyd Webber, it is now in its tenth year and expanded to include entries on destinations such as Scandinavia and the Far East.
