Michelin : Michelin Red Hotel Restaurant Guide New York (Hotel Restaurant Guides) before purchasing it in order to gage whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised Michelin Red Hotel Restaurant Guide New

York (Hotel Restaurant Guides):

The three-star rankings for this year's Michelin Guide for New York City restaurants are exactly the same as last year. They include Eleven Madison Park, Chef's Table at Brooklyn Fare, Jean-Georges, Le Bernardin, and Per Se and Masa, two restaurants at the Time Warner Center. All 10 of the two-star places would've been the same as last year, too, if it weren't for the addition of the relocated tasting-menu spot Aska, in Williamsburg, from the Nordic chef and Noma alum Frederik Berselius. (It's one of six Michelin-starred places in Williamsburg; Brooklyn has 12 total.) The only other change from the two-star list is that Ichimura at Brushstroke, the destination sushi spot downtown Manhattan that recently closed amid relocation rumors, was dropped from the list entirely. The nine other two-star stalwarts: Aquavit, Atera, Blanca, Daniel, Jungsik, Marea, The Modern, Momofuku Ko, and Soto. Things are much more interesting in the one-star category, where there are 12 new establishments from the list of 77. Some of those are not all that surprising, such as Mario Batali's La Sirena and the eponymous Ginter Seeger NY, both from long-standing chefs who have a lot of Michelin cred. Then there's Nix, the delightful vegetable-centric restaurant in the East Village, and Contra, a forward-thinking spot on the Lower East Side.
