Deborah Huso : Moon Spotlight Great Smoky Mountains National Park before purchasing it in order to gage whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised Moon Spotlight Great Smoky Mountains National Park:

1 of 1 people found the following review helpful. Keep looking...By P. Stoeger This book is not up to the quality that I have come to expect from Moon. The information is somewhat out-dated in that some listed hotels out of business, and URLs that I tried were no longer working. The guide is a brief listing areas surrounding the park, and lists of lodging and restaurants there and little about areas in the park. If you are looking of a great guide book for the Great Smokey Mountains National Park... Keep looking. This isn't it. 0 of 0 people found the following review helpful. Great guide for GSMNP By Diane Mastrodomenico Great guide for GSMNP! Great details, suggestions for each section of GSMNP! About the Author A mountain girl since birth, Deborah Huso grew up on a small farm in Virginia's Blue Ridge Mountains, just six miles from Shenandoah National Park. Throughout her childhood, she camped, hiked, and explored along the Skyline Drive and Blue Ridge Parkway, developing a love for the southern Appalachian landscape. Deborah left the mountains briefly to study English and history at Gettysburg College, and then to pursue her graduate degree in American studies at The College of William and Mary, but came back to the mountains as soon as she could. Over the course of the last 10 years, the Smoky Mountains have become a second home to Deborah, who has spent countless hours traveling the region's back roads and hiking trails, and wandering its small mountain towns. Her passion is discovering the road less traveled and the trail where you'll meet no one. Deborah has written more than 100 articles on the Blue Ridge and Smoky Mountains for national and regional magazines and newspapers, including Women's Health, AAA World, Disney FamilyFun, Preservation, Military Officer, and Blue Ridge Country, where she also serves as contributing editor.
