Susanna Henighan Potter : Moon Spotlight Nashville before purchasing it in order to gage whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised Moon Spotlight Nashville:

1 of 2 people found the following review helpful. I need more!By P DulanyI was looking for a book to introduce me to the city since I have a conference there in a few days. Since I could not find a Fodor's guide to the city, I tried this. Especially lacking are places to eat, neighborhoods that are safe / unsafe, and things to do outside the whole country music thing.The book does provide a frank guide, telling you that some museums are worth it, but others are not. It also does cover the city's history and the basic country music attractions.Of course, since the entire city was recently underwater, ANY guide that I would have purchased would not have mattered, as the hotel that the conference was booked in (and is covered in the guide) is now closed for 90 days and has been moved to downtown Nashville.

Moon Spotlight Nashville is a 110-page compact guide covering the best of Nashville, including the nearby Franklin, Walking Horse Country, and the Natchez Trace. Tennessee native Susanna Henighan Potter offers her firsthand advice on what sights are must-sees, and sightseeing highlights maps make planning your time easy. This lightweight guide is packed with recommendations on sights, entertainment, shopping, recreation, accommodations, food, and transportation. Helpful maps guide travelers through this historic locale. This Spotlight guidebook is excerpted from Moon Nashville Memphis.

About the Author Susanna Henighan Potter was born and raised in the foothills of the Smoky Mountains in east Tennessee. Chilhowee Mountain stood sentry over the old farmhouse where she grew up, imagining trips to faraway times and places. Despite her best efforts, however, Susanna's upbringing was well grounded in Tennessee things: the wail of old-time bluegrass music, the bright orange of the Tennessee Volunteers, and the electricity of Friday night high school football. Family outings were almost always journeys to one or another of Tennessee's natural attractions, and she is a seasoned car camper. Susanna graduated from Oberlin College with a degree in economics and enough clips from the Oberlin to land a job as a reporter in the British Virgin Islands. For several years, she wrote for local newspapers and filed reports for the Associated Press, returning to Tennessee for regular visits. In 2006, her first Moon Handbook, Moon Virgin Islands, was published. Writing Moon Nashville Memphis has been a journey of re-discovery for Susanna. It meant taking a second look at many places that were part of the landscape of her childhood. It also meant taking that thrilling first look at some parts of the state that were delightfully new to her. Susanna lives with her husband in the Virgin Islands, where she works for the Government of the British Virgin Islands. She returns to Tennessee to visit her family several times a year.
