From the Author
It's hard to say enough about mountain biking in McCall. Wilderness-like trails in the Payette National Forest are world-class, and if they were located in California, they'd be closed to mountain biking by now. McCall is an attractive town of 4,000 residents next to a clean lake that's popular for sailing, swimming, canoeing and fishing in the summer months. Author Stephen Stuebner and his family love to camp outside of McCall during the summer and ride all day. Author Roger Phillips lives in McCall, that lucky fella.
